SUNGLOW RANCH RECEIVES TRIP ADVISOR ACCOLADES

PEARCE, ARIZONA -- Sunglow Ranch, an intimate guest ranch property and birders' paradise abutting the Chiricahua Mountains in southeast Arizona, has announced that it has received a 2011 Certificate of Excellence from Christine Petersen, President of Trip Advisor for Business.

The award is in recognition of Sunglow's achievement of the highest Trip Advisor rating of five, on its well known scale of five circles, based on independent reviews by its guests. The ratings measure guest feedback on specific criteria including value, sleep quality, cleanliness and service. Of 92 reviews, Sunglow Ranch has achieved an overall excellent rating from 93.5% of its respondees.

According to Sunglow Ranch owner Mitch Sayare, "Trip Advisor's recognition of our continuing efforts to serve our guests well is very gratifying, and reflects the strides we have made in both our service level and our commitment to a very special guest experience."

The relaxed atmosphere of the Ranch offers guests a unique southeast Arizona experience with distant mountain views, charming casitas and dark skies for incredible stargazing. The Ranch is ideally situated at an elevation of 5,340 feet, providing cooler temperatures and pleasant relief from sweltering metropolitan areas.

The Ranch offers its guests a way to reconnect with nature in peaceful surroundings, where one can appreciate the restorative value of true silence. While telephone and television service is available if needed in a central office, these amenities are purposely omitted from guest accommodations. Complimentary wifi is available to guests who must remain connected with family or the office.
